Qualcomm has revealed that it shipped an estimated 17 million Snapdragon 800 processors last quarter, which places its estimate for the actual total shipment number somewhere between 14 and 20 million, putting the company comfortably ahead of rival Advanced Micro Devices. The comments were made on Qualcomm's quarterly earnings conference call, where it reported revenues of $8.6 billion, up from $3.9 billion the previous quarter. While Qualcomm had previously predicted that it would ship around 10 million Snapdragon 800 devices in Q1, the company has moved its quarterly guidance up to between 14 to 20 million. If the company reaches 20 million units, this will only be a slight increase over last quarter's actual shipments of 18.7 million Snapdragon 600 chips. "On our path to an industry-leading 450 million revenue year by 2014, we are working with a number of customers to help them take advantage of the PC and smartphone launch events this quarter," said Paul E. Jacobs, CEO of Qualcomm. "We expect product availability to increase further, including our high-end 850 processor due later this month, and customer demand for our 2G/3G/LTE devices in Q2." In last year's quarterly earnings call, Qualcomm had estimated 8 million units to be shipped during the first quarter. The company's first quarter revenue increased by 31 percent to $5.68 billion, while its gross margin improved to 58.3 percent from 56.8 percent. The company posted a profit of $0.57 per share on revenues of $5.68 billion. Qualcomm was awarded a new 5G patent earlier today. The company is also working on a next-generation HyperScale SIM card solution, and it will launch a 5G-ready smartphone within the next few months. Intraoperative tumor cell dissemination in patients with cancer of the pancreas. An analysis based on histological examination of the resected pancreas. The objective of this study was to assess the frequency of intraoperative tumor cell dissemination in pancreatic cancer patients with special emphasis on the risk factors, tumor cell types, and tumor grade as well as the role of lymphatic invasion and lymph node metastasis in the development of the disseminated tumor cells.

The study group consisted of 30 patients who underwent operation for pancreatic cancer with curative intent at the Department of General, Transplant, Thoracic, and Vascular Surgery at the University of Essen. Before tumor extirpation, formalin-fixed tumor samples were
